

Tomorrow....

November 12, 2011

Tomorrow...a word filled with hope and promise most of the time, but sometimes a word that is associated with putting things off.

Tomorrow for us, the Nittany Nation, is a big day. It is the day we write the first page in our new book because it is the day that the nation, maybe the world, will be watching us. So far, with the exception of the riot, we have been taking steps to show all what Penn State is about and what we STILL ARE. There will be a lot of excitement about this in the beginning....the hope and promise for a brighter and even better Penn State will be quite evident.

Then, sooner or later, the other tomorrow will set in. The one where we will be given an opportunity, however small it is, to demonstrate that we STILL ARE Penn State and we will set it aside...get to it tomorrow...and we won't get to it. In some cases that will be okay, but in others where there is abuse or neglect or anything illegal going on...we can't wait until tomorrow to act.

From this day forward, we have to try our best to live the words of our alma mater...and let no act of ours bring shame and additionally, no inaction of ours bring shame.

The world is watching...lets make this book a bestseller.

« Forever Lions Endless Pride — A Lucky Penny »