

We All Are...Support PSU With These Tees

August 9, 2012

For me, Penn State will always stand for a time in my life when I made life-long friends, got a great education, and put simply, grew up. To be honest, the first thing that stood out to me when I arrived in University Park was the sense of unity and camaraderie I got from strangers. Everyone was welcoming and friendly, because I was a part of the community now. When the Sandusky scandal broke, people kinda lost that feeling of togetherness. Suddenly peoples opinions turned into war cries and became the cause for endless internet arguments. So I wanted to do something to stop all the pointless fights and bring us together. I thought if there's one thing that really unites the PSU community, it's our involvement in various charity organizations. I figured I'd design a simple t-shirt and donate all the profits to RAINN and THON. I used "I am" for the individual, because Penn State isn't a handful of administrators, it's each individual student. And I used "we all are" to drive home the message of unity. Peoples opinions on the Sandusky scandal, who was right, who was wrong, what did or didn't happen, that doesn't really matter. What matters is how we respond as a community and a university. I figured this would point us in the right direction at least, as Nittany lions united, for the good & for the glory.
